CONCLUSION	282

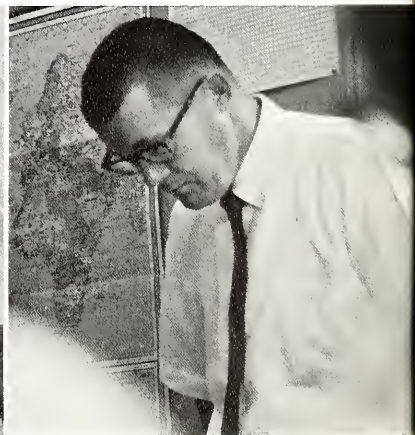

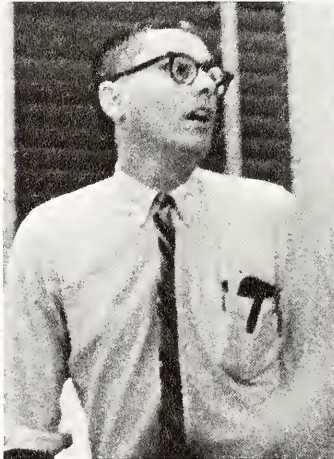

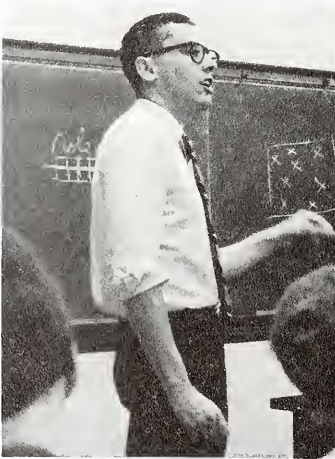

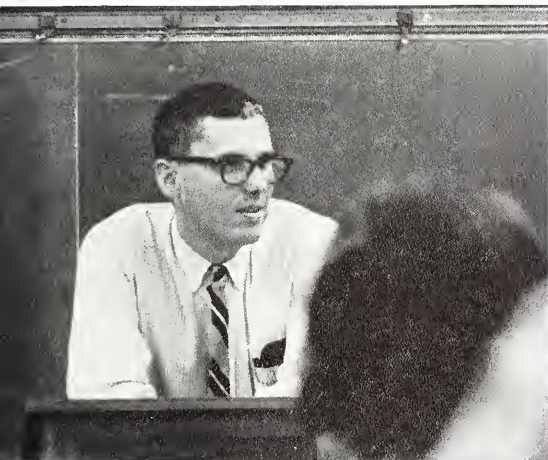

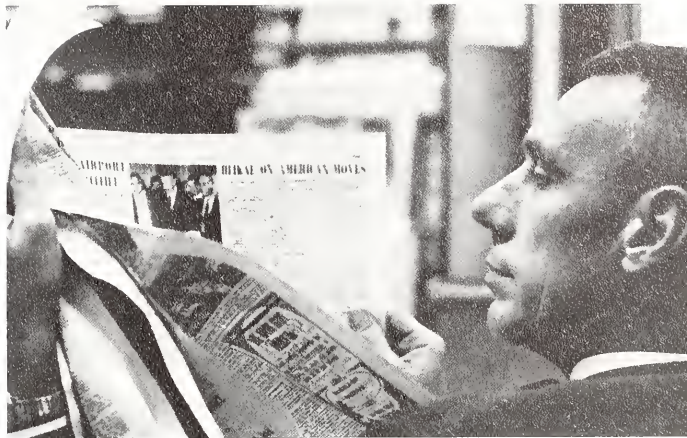

Mary Washington is individuals. Over two thousand faces, many of them unfamiliar, confront each of us every day as we search for identity within the college community.

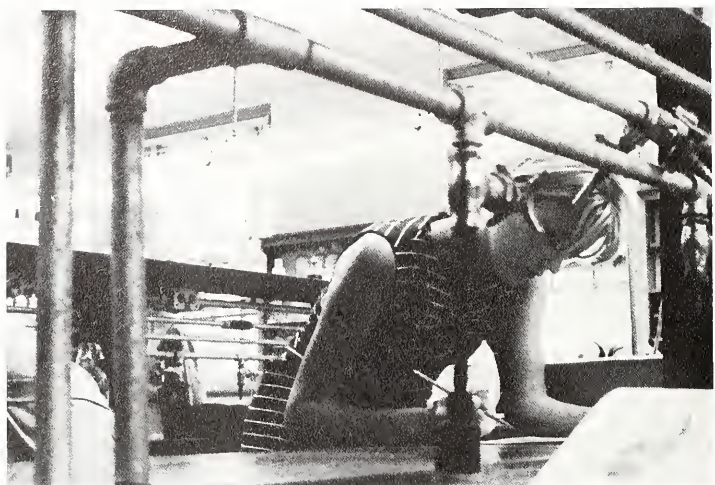

Mary Washington is professors. Researching in the library, sparking class discussion, giving us new insights, they bring to our community their enthusiasm for learning and growth.

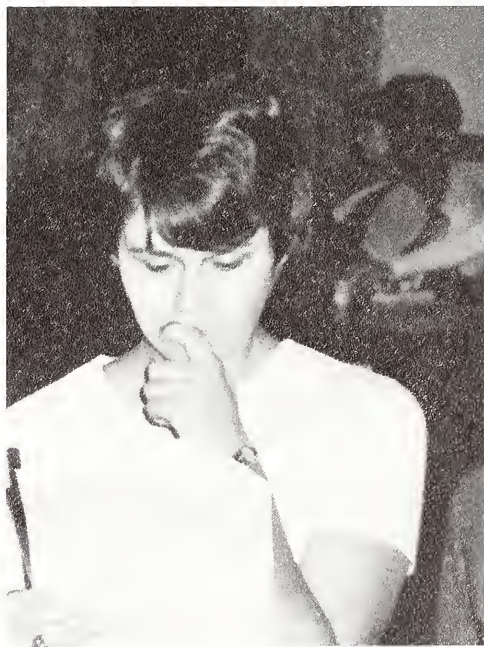

Mary Washington is study. We hawk in the library, the dormitory, the academic building. We cram from early in the morning to late at night, and wonder will it ever end.

Mary Washington is emotions—emotions reflected on the surface of the face, as unique as the students themselves. Every day we encounter weariness . . . inspiration . . . concentration.

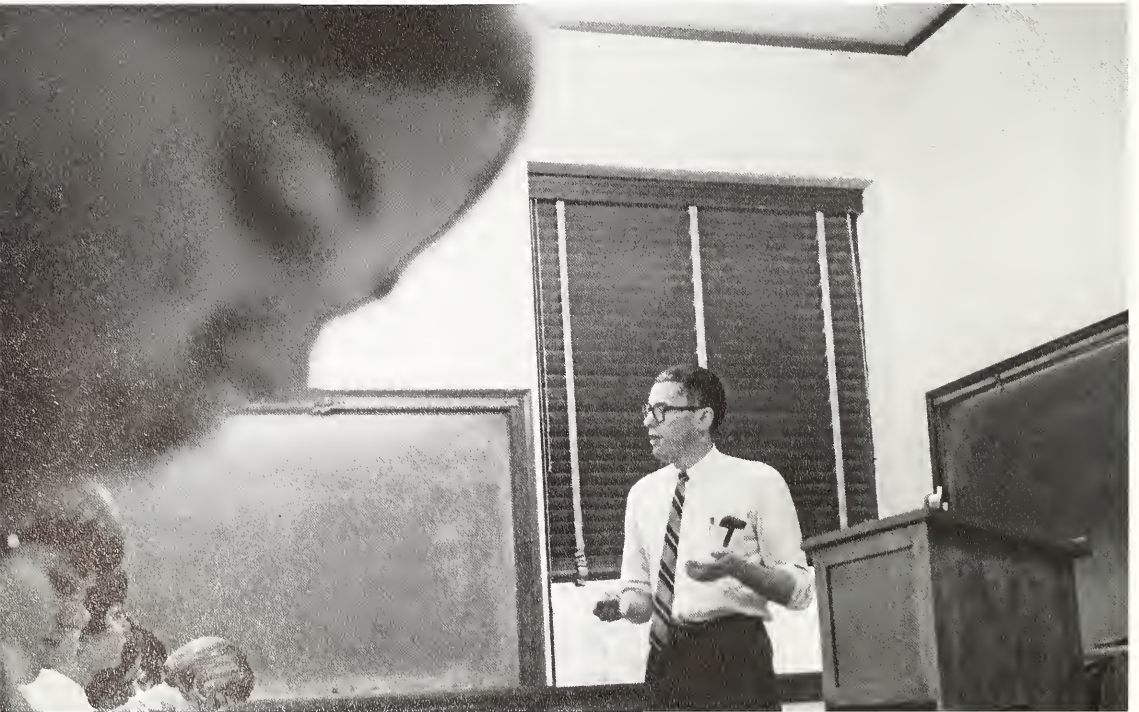

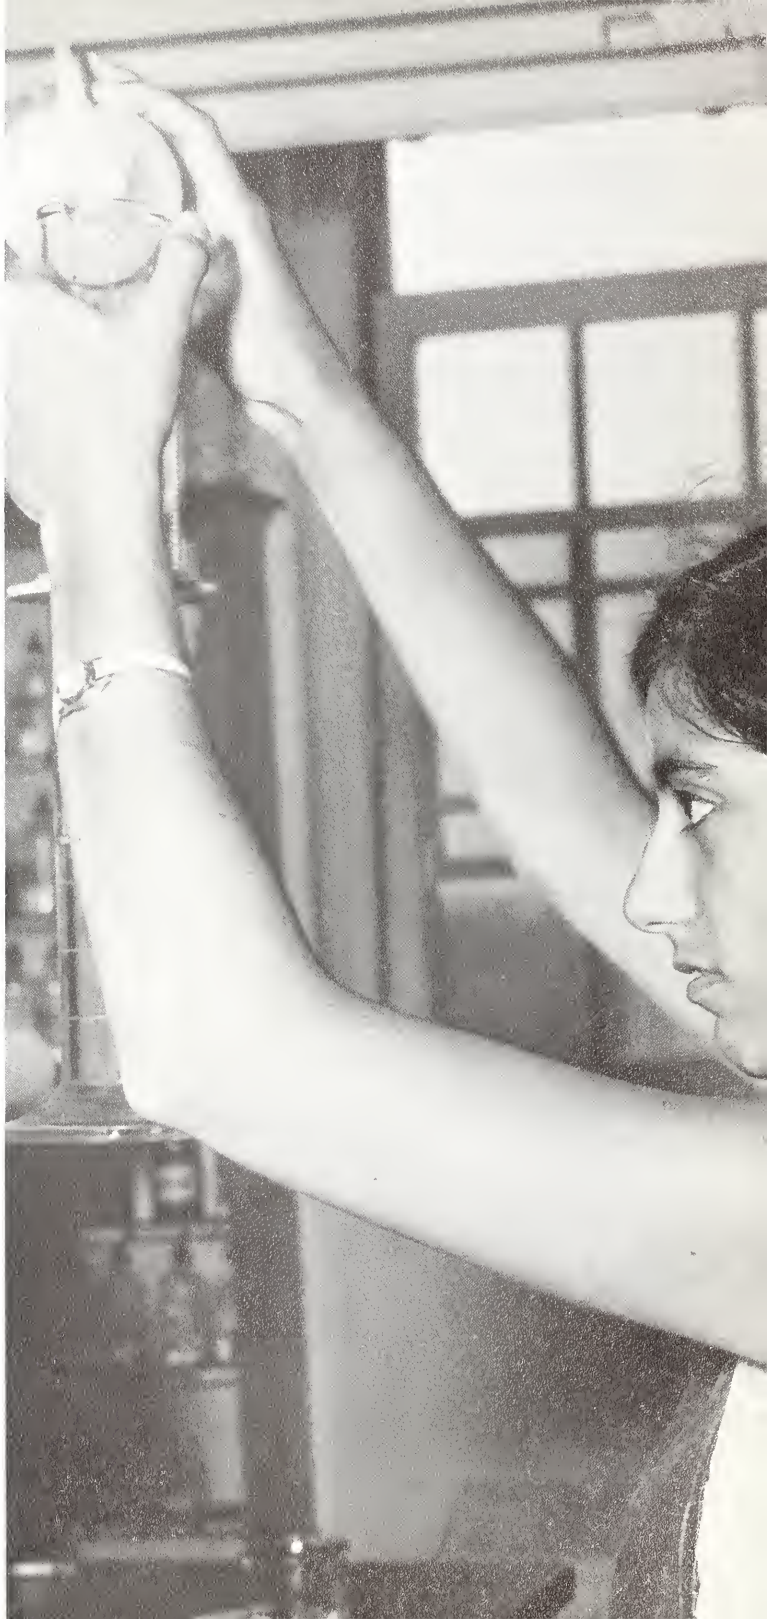

Mary Washington is routine. Never a day goes by that we do not fight the chaos at Seacobeck, endure the inevitable bookstore delay, and waste our lives in unceasing lines.

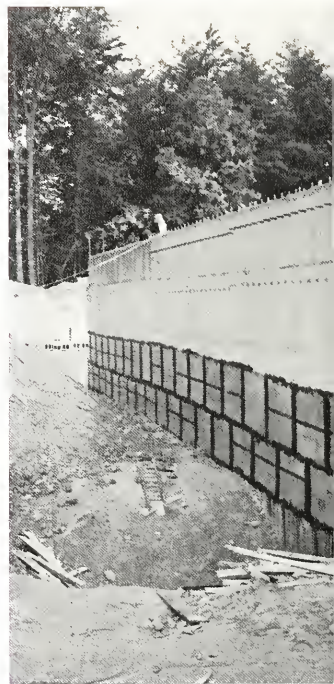

Mary Washington is classrooms—classrooms in many forms. Science laboratories, seminars, the swimming pools, and the ever-present and never-ending lectures alternate as stages for our education.

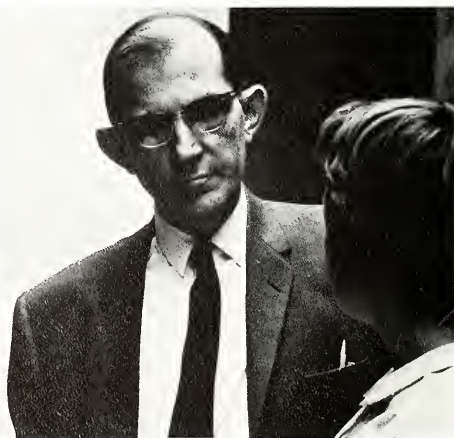

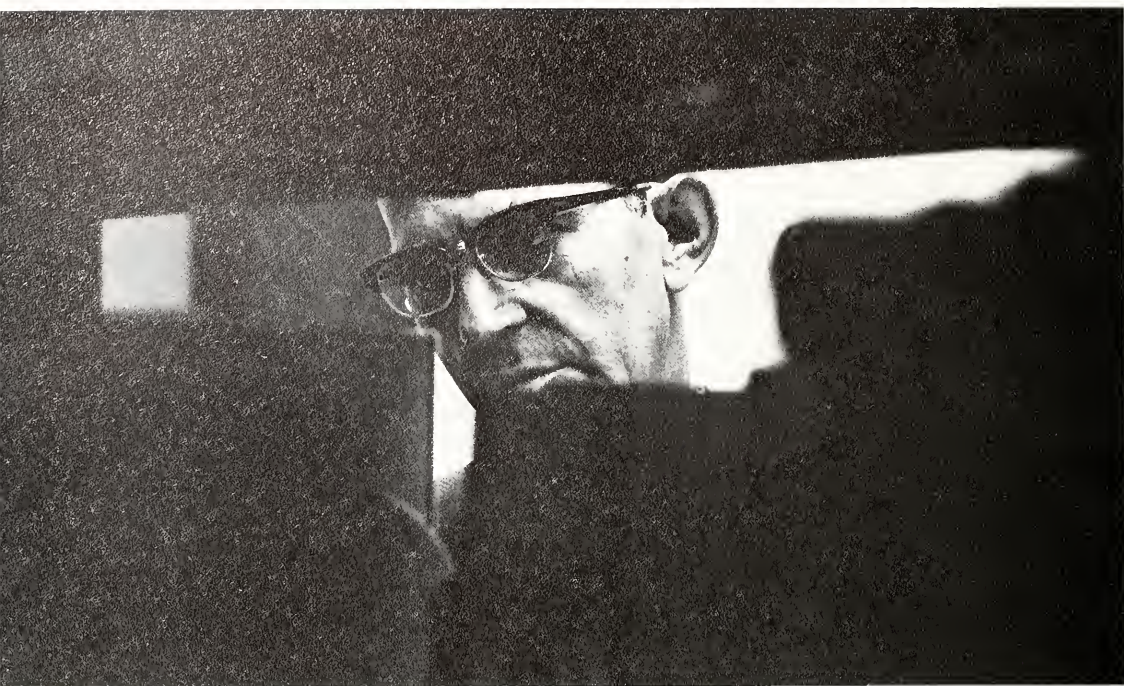

Mary Washington is the campus. The fresh paint of Jefferson and the excavation for Goolrick excite our hopes as much as the library arouses our sentiment.

Mary Washington is personal development. Each of the giggly freshmen at the beanie yell becomes, with time, the senior at hundredth night, and finally, at graduation.

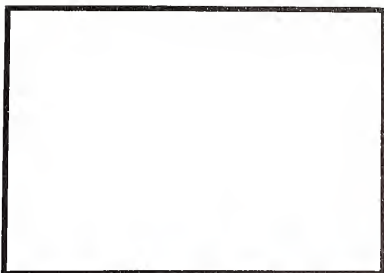

IN DEDICATION

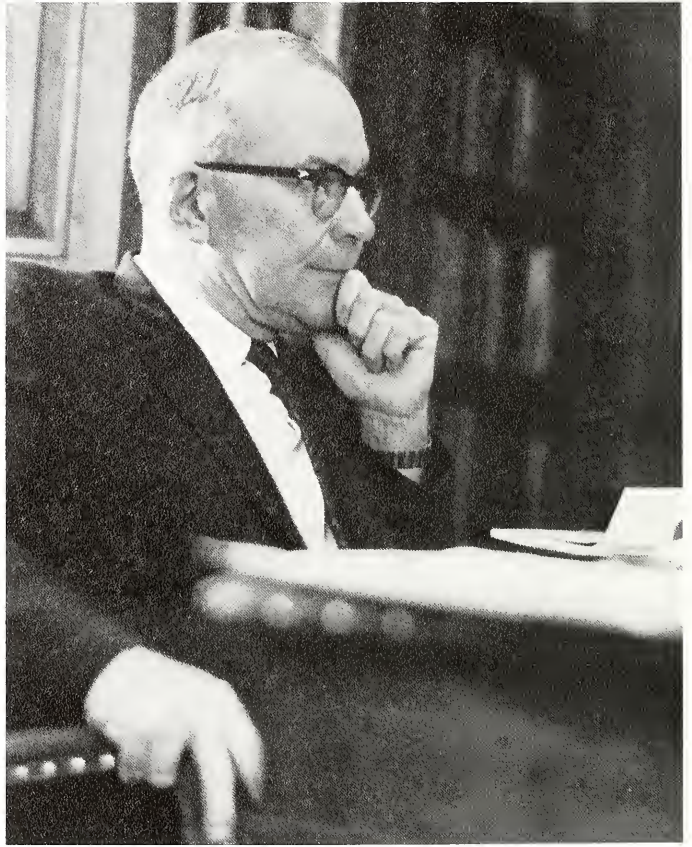

When a man invests twenty-five years in one institution, he is investing not only years, but a major portion of his life. With the devotion of a true teacher and a gentleman, Dr. Carrol H. Quenzel has helped create in his students a love for learning and, through the E. Lee Trinkle Library, has helped provide the resources for our further study. But Dr. Quenzel's influence extends beyond the library, into the classroom and throughout the campus, where he never forgets even one student's name. Gentle and appreciative, respectful and scholarly, Dr. Quenzel has dedicated his life to us and to our continuing development. With gratitude, we dedicate the 1968 Battlefield to him and to his library.

Stressing the interrelationship of scholarship, leadership, and service in our college community, the Cap and Gown Chapter at Mary Washington College gives tours to prospective students to acquaint them with the campus, promotes intellectual competition through the College Bowl, and honors academic achievement with a tea for Dean's List students. To commemorate the fiftieth anniversary of National Mortar Board, the Chapter is establishing a Mortar Board Scholarship for Mary Washington students.

Indian Professor Discusses Education, Role of Women

By NANCY RICHARDSON

Upon entering the faculty office in room 25A of Chandler Hall, one is immediately aware of the presence of a woman. She is Mrs. Zeba Ansari, professor of Contemporary Indian Literature and Contemporary Indian Thought, and represents her country in the United States-India Women's College Exchange Program.

Initiated four years ago, the program enables both nations to exchange techniques in teaching, and Mrs. Ansari, a member of the staff, returned to the program when two of her colleagues from the College of Education, Andhra Pradesh, returned from their sojourn in the United States.
